Cristallo, a Luxury Collection Resort & Spa, Cortina d'Ampezzo... The Iconic Jewel of the Italian Dolomites...

Originally inspired by the Art Nouveau movement that characterizes its architecture, Cristallo, A Luxury Collection Resort & Spa is the first Mountain Resort belonging to The Luxury Collection. Nestled within the soaring peaks of the dramatic Dolomites range, reminiscent of a jeweled coronet and declared Unesco World Heritage, the resort is surrounded by alpine valleys and offers a venerable array of pastimes through its seamless adaptation between winter and summer seasons. A notable rendezvous for Italian high society, Cristallo's alluring service and enchanting cultural heritage have endured for over a century. Levels of comfort and courtesy convey the hotel's innate gracious Italian hospitality that filters through every aspect of its legacy.

Hotel History:

In 1901 Cortina was a small mountain village under the flag of the Austro-Hungarian Empire when Emilia and Giuseppe Menardi opened the Palace Hotel Cristallo. It was designed by the master architect Gustavo Ghiretti, inspired by art nouveau in honour of noble Viennese traditions, and has overlooked the valley ever since, standing out in white against the bright green meadows. Its elegance, its privileged position on the edge of the woods and breathtaking view of the Tofane mountains, together with the great dedication of the Menardi couple, soon made it one of the most sought-after international destinations. The earliest hotel registers, in fact, already contain the signatures of famous personalities, such as Leo Tolstoy, and guests from every part of the world.

The Great War: The First World War was a tragic blow that ended the golden life of that era in 1915. The hotel was set up as a military hospital, a use that left it almost completely destroyed.

With the post-war reconstruction, a new era of tourism began in Cortina in 1947. Careful renovation work restored the Cristallo to its old splendour and, under the management of Leo Menardi and his wife Ofelia Zardini, the hotel once again welcomed guests in that elegant and exclusive atmosphere for which it had always been recognised.

Rooms & Suites:

The resort's unique style permeates all 74 guest rooms and suites, which envelop guests in sophisticated charm and modern amenities. Honoring Frank Sinatra and Peter Sellers, two Presidential Suites are apartment-like retreats that boast the highest level of comforts and private spas with saunas and Turkish baths. Personal butler service can be provided
